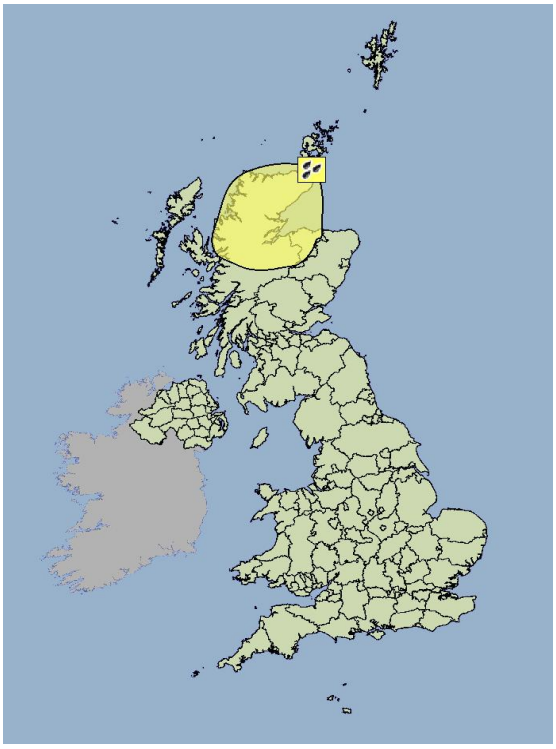
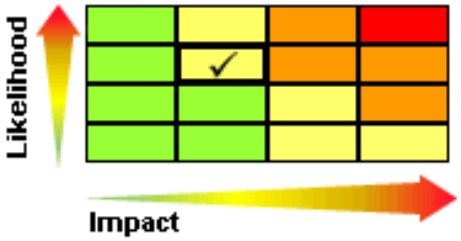
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Heavy showers are expected to develop through today and are expected to become slow moving in places. These slow moving showers could give as much as 20 mm in an hour and perhaps as much as 40 mm over several hours. As is the nature of showers, some areas will miss the heaviest downpours. The showers will start to ease before dusk.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 13:00 on Sun, 30th Jul 2017 until 21:00 on Sun, 30th Jul 2017

Heavy showers of rain will affect Northern mainland Scotland today. The showers will be slow moving in places with torrential downpours which could be thundery.

Localised flooding of prone sections of road could disrupt travel, whilst minor flooding of land may also occur in a few areas.
